

Date: November 21, 2011

I have known Steve and Jim of PolySolutions Advisors for four years. It is my pleasure to talk about excellent advice and service provided by Jim and Steve to help grow One World Biotech, Inc., a contract research organization that I founded. They thoroughly evaluated company vision and goals, markets, and financials, and were instrumental in developing company business and financial plans. In my association with them over the past four years I learned from them about how to run my company in a professional manner and used their insight to steer the company in the right direction. Thinking more about our professional association, three things immediately come to my mind:

1. Passion: Jim's and Steve's bios only begin to tell the story of their expertise and experience. They have a wonderful understanding of principles of how to setup, run and grow companies and a real world practical knowledge about intricate details that need to be evaluated and taken care to succeed in the market place. They are very passionate about what they do and genuinely interested in client's company success. They applied their expertise and experience to One World Biotech's unique situation to come up with a plan for success, which I have been following. Their guidance has been invaluable to me and my company.
2. Personality: Steve and Jim are a pleasure to work with. Period. I always found them to be open, straight forward and helpful. No matter how much experience business leaders have, they benefit from mentoring and constructive criticism. Steve and Jim have skills and proven track record to make the mentoring and learning process fun and enjoyable.
3. Support: We set up business, marketing and financial plans in place with PolySolutions Advisors' help. We continue to follow their advice. They are always available to discuss and give valuable advice and have been very supportive of our company.

Malla Padidam, Ph.D.
President, One World Biotech, Inc.
Malla@OneWorldBio.com